

"Grief is like a kaleidoscope. Its colours and shapes shift with every turn of the wheel. Sometimes grief is so agonizingly painful, full of the darkest of blue shades of suffering. Other times, the light shines through, and grief becomes so deeply divine in hue, and we are faced with something so unbearably beautiful ~ it truly is unnameable. The height of our grief ravages against the depths of our love, one in the humble presence of the other. Grief, the ever-rendering turning points in our lives, the ever turning wheel of our lives."
